Joshua Gersen, Conductor
An artist of impeccable musical credentials, Joshua Gersen is widely respected as an engaging and inspiring conductor, able to communicate effortlessly with both young and established orchestras internationally. A native of the New York area, he made his debut as a conductor at the early age of 11 and has established himself as a dynamic presence on the podium ever since. Gersen recently concluded his tenure as the assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic, where he most notably made his subscription debut at just a few hours' notice, filling in for an indisposed Semyon Bychkov. In addition to his love of contemporary music, he remains passionate about the core classical repertoire, in particular the German and Russian masters, as well as the classic American composers, including Copland, Gershwin, Barber and Bernstein.
